THE J. E. JONES LETTER

SETTLING RAILROAD STRIKES
When the Railroad Labor Board was created as an incident of the Transportation Act the proposition to clothe the Board with mandatory powers was defeated. Congress finally compromised by "leaving the teeth" out of the law, and in establishing a tribunal that can only render decisions.

The railroads are being run by their managers and the labor unions. The Government "holds the bag," and in cases of shortages has paid a guaranteed income to stockholders. For this privilege these private powers have permitted the Government to arbitrate "in the public interest" certain differences of opinion that have heretofore caused strikes and lockouts.

The Labor Board recently "out-lawed" the striking shopmen because the strike was against the order of the Board. The incident is pointed out as a defiance of the power and authority of the Federal Government. A good deal more attention is being paid to it than was accorded a similar action on the part of a great railroad system that refused to pay the wage awarded some of its employees by the Labor Board. These facts point out that the railroad managers and the railroad workmen have offended equally—that both have defied the Government. If the offenders might have their heads knocked together they would likely discover the truth in "The Beggar's Opera," when two of the leading characters exclaimed: "Brother, brother, we are both in the wrong."

The Government went a long way in the war when it recognized labor unions as an institution. The Railroad Labor Board took a drastic step when it told the strikers that having refused to accept its decision that it would no longer recognize them in court. It was an attempt to "put teeth" in a toothless law. And it is little wonder that from the viewpoint of Samuel Gompers the performance looked "holshovich." But in Washington where every attempt to establish courts to try labor disputes has been blocked there is unusual interest in the Board's action, inasmuch as the upheaval that it has occasioned is likely to determine whether public opinion will stand squarely in support of a Government board even though it lacks mandatory powers. Students of history are aware that the early decisions of the United States Supreme Court were tossed about as lightly as the decisions of the Railroad Labor Board. Perhaps the present upheaval will give power to the Board that could not be secured by legislation. The present experience is rough on the strikers, but new phases in Government methods usually claim their victims. The defiance of the railroad managers and the unions may result in establishing compulsory arbitration of strikes and lockouts—a principle that has long been at stake.

A DELICIOUS SCANDAL BREWING

President Harding's demand that all patents, copyrights and property be returned by the Chemical Foundation in order that they may be handed back to the German owners has created consternation in Washington.

During the war German property was seized and treated with a good deal of disregard for the German owners. It was openly boasted that German commercialism was to be forever destroyed in the United States. In consequence there weren't many questions asked when these properties were disposed of to American interests. But, at the time, many of the deals were regarded as "great bargains." The outstanding bargain appears to have been in the sale of the dye patents. The Allen Property Custodian, acting under a special law passed for the purpose, transferred the property, said to be worth perhaps $200,000,000, to a concern of which Francis P. Garvan, who succeeded A. Mitchell Palmer, is now the head. Palmer has been in the background all the way through, but Garvan has been in the forefront of all the transactions. It is pointed out that the vast German dye interests were sold for less than $500,000.

AMERICAN ORGANIZATION

OF DYE INDUSTRY
The Chemical Foundation interests who secured the German dye patents during the war took up with individuals, previously licensed by the Federal Trade Commission, the advisability of giving up their licenses and coming in under the Foundation system. At the same time the Foundation began licensing formulas of their patents to private manufacturers, and about 150 concerns invested some $150,000,000, including the DuPont interests, which put in $15,000,000.

The background of the present situation is as follows:

WEST BETHEL CHURCH

W. O. Thomas, Minister

A fine old gentleman, who was greatly afflicted with rheumatism, accidentally found a cure for his malady. He says he put on an old pair of trousers that had hung in the woodshed for years. During the time when the trousers were idle a swarm of bees had made a cozy nest in the seat. The old man says he didn't have the trousers on more than ten minutes, but he didn't notice his rheumatism for many days after.

Every man has his spiritual difficulties. (That is one reason he is a man, and not an animal.) But in our busy world, the sense of spiritual need is very often crowded out. That is why many people think religion is an unnecessary evil that has to be tolerated. It is also a sign that the bees have done up their job brown, so that the man so unfortunately convinced does not feel his spiritual need.

Sunday we will think together on "The Pursuit of Happiness." Are you happy? Or are you deceived into thinking you are happy? In your pursuit of happiness, are you pursuing the moon, or the end of the rainbow, or a meal of pickled eel's feet, or are you after the things you can have, and that really satisfy.

Morning Worship at 10:30. Theme, "The Pursuit of Happiness."
Sunday School at 11:30.
Evening Devotions at 7:30. Theme, "Mercy's Reward."
A cordial invitation to all.

UPTON UNION CHURCH

H. C. Brokenbush, Minister

Morning service at 11:00.
Sunday School at 12:00.
The evening service Sunday will be one of song with a short talk by the minister. You will enjoy it.

Wednesday at 7:30 P. M. Regular meeting of Young People's Christian Endeavor. Let everyone come.

UNIVERSALIST FAIR

The annual fair at the Universalist Chapel, Wednesday, July 26, is one of the "coming events." One of the new features will be a doll table. Buy a doll and you may get a large doll free. All dressed dolls, different prices. Buy a handkerchief and you may be fortunate enough to get the rustic chair free. There will also be on sale attractive fancy work, pretty and useful aprons, a good supply of home cooked food, a variety of home made candy, also ice cream and cake.

Miss Margaret Herriek, who has been in Boston for the past few years, has returned to Bethel to the home of her parents, Judge and Mrs. A. E. Herriek.

GET-TOGETHER OF CLASS OF '21

On Saturday, July 1, the class of '21 were invited to spend the day at "Point Comfort" camp at Songo Pond.

At noon a picnic lunch was served with green peas as a special dish. At this hour each one present was given a little bow ribbon, made of the class colors, gold and purple, the purpose being to hold the class together, to show class spirit and to be loyal to our class colors. The afternoon was spent in canoeing, boating and swimming. After having spent a very pleasant day we bid our hostess good bye and voted to meet again next year on the same date.

GRANGE NEWS

BETHEL GRANGE

Bethel Grange held its regular session July 6. The ladies served supper as usual. The Master called to order at the usual time. One application was read and accepted. The literary program was as follows:

Roll Call, Answered by quotations from the ritual.
Discussion: What is the best labor-saving device that has been invented for the housewife? By two women.
Song, Bertha Mundt.
Reading, Bertha Mundt.
Discussion: Resolved, that a college education is worth more to a young man than a good farm. By the men.

Play, The Bugtown Band.
Closed in forenoon. There were forty-one members and four visitors present. The next meeting will be held July 20.

WOODROW WILSON FOUNDATION

Mr. B. G. McIntire of Norway who had charge of raising Oxford County's part of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation reports the matter now closed. The quota suggested for this county was $400. Although there was no concerted effort to even mention the matter to all those known to sympathize with the movement $52, given by the following: Rev. S. T. Achenbach, Mrs. Mary Achenbach, H. H. Hastings, Miss Fannie Hastings, Mr. D. S. Hastings, Mrs. D. S. Hastings, Mr. C. L. Pollard, Mrs. W. O. Straw, Mr. W. J. Upton, Paul C. Thurston, Maud L. Thurston, Mrs. J. A. Thurston.

One of the pleasant things about raising the fund has been the feeling that the money was freely given and entirely without partisan spirit.

The towns of the county gave sums as per list below:

Andover,	$16.00
Buckfield,	22.00
Bethel,	52.00
Brookfield,	19.00
Byron,	3.00
Canton,	10.00
Denmark,	10.00
Dixfield,	14.00
Fryeburg,	21.00
Gilead,	3.25
Greenwood,	1.00
Hanover,	0.00
Hartford,	10.00
Hebron,	2.00
Hiram,	14.75
Lovell,	5.00
Macon,	9.00
Mexico,	25.00
Norway,	61.25
Newry,	4.50
Oxford,	2.00
Paris,	40.25
Pera,	0.25
Porter,	11.00
Roxbury,	5.00
Rumford,	70.25
Stonham,	3.25
Sweden,	3.50
Upton,	6.50
Waterford,	18.00
Woodstock,	17.25
Milton Pl.,	1.00
Magalloway Pl.,	1.00

$500.00
Only three counties in the State, Knox, Lincoln and Piscataquis had a greater percentage over the suggested quota than Oxford and but two towns in the county gave more than Bethel.

Mr. F. A. Brown, our road commissioner, has had his troubles during the past two weeks in fixing up the roads which were badly damaged by the rains. If he has not fixed up your road be patient and he will do it, but it takes time. Don't kick, but take your shovel and help keep the water in the ditches along side of your road. If each and every one of us would spend ten or fifteen minutes and do this our roads would be saved from washouts and the town would be much better off. Be a booster and not a knocker.

A few of our citizens are interested in a baseball team to represent the town this year. A start was made a short time ago and the team is being made up as fast as material can be secured. Of course, we do not expect to have a world beater, but was are trying to have a team that will be able to hold its own with teams of ordinary calibre. What we need mostly is financial backing; if we can get a sufficient amount subscribed we are going ahead with the project.

Last Saturday a game was played with the Bryant Pond team, the latter team winning by a score of 8 to 3 in eleven innings. In this game Sampson the Bethel pitcher, allowed only six hits and struck out 13 of the opposing team, while Morse the Bryant Pond pitcher was touched up for 9 hits, striking out 7 men.

Since this game the Bethel team has been shaken up, new players being added, and a stronger team will be put on the field for the next game which will be played next Saturday.

Give us some support, attend the games, and help the boys. If you have any contributions to make, large or small, send or hand them to F. O. Robertson.

Boost us instead of knocking, show us the stuff and we will produce the team.

The lineup of the team last week was as follows: Bartlett c, Sampson p, Howe 1b, McGovern 2b, H. Young 3b, R. Young ss, Robertson lf, Inman rf, Gerald cf.

NOTICE

Tickets for the Chautauque will be on sale next week. Those who signed for them last year, please be ready to take and pay for same when the agent calls on you. Those who want to get theirs before can get them of D. G. Lovejoy.

DISTINGUISHED CHINESE LECTURER ON CHAUTAUQUE PROGRAM

One of the finest numbers on the Chautauque program this season will be the lecture to be given by Dr. William Hung. Dr. Hung is one of the most eminent Chinese in America and is the son of a well-known scholar and statesman, the late Honorable Hoong Hiee of Shantung, China.

Although he has been in America but five years, he has received degrees from Ohio Wesleyan and Columbia Universities, and has been elected to membership in several learned societies. He is one of the organizers of the Bureau of Chinese Information in New York. The problem of furthering friendly relations between China and America has been one of Dr. Hung's chief interests since he has been in this country.

The subject of Dr. Hung's lecture will be "China in the World Drama." He has achieved remarkable popularity as a lecturer, not only because he brings first hand information about a subject in which the whole world is now interested, but also because he is an impassioned orator with an enviable command of English and an irresistible sense of humor.

Immediately upon completing his Chautauque engagements, Dr. Hung will sail for China where he will take up his duties as professor of history in the University of Peking.

Miss Luella Boothby of Melrose, Mass., is visiting Miss Alice Mason and mother, Mrs. O. M. Mason.

Rev. J. H. Little was called to Newry, Monday, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Lee Vail, who passed away Saturday morning.

Scout Executive Harold Perham and wife are being congratulated on the birth of a daughter, Natalie Nelson, born July 7, weighing 8 1/2 pounds. Mother and child are both doing well.

RUMFORD

A grand military concert and ball is to be held on Thursday evening of this week, under the auspices of the American Legion. The concert will be rendered by the 103rd Inf. Band, and Co. B 103rd Inf. Maine National Guard will give an exhibition drill. At this event, the American Legion will give away the Chevrolet sedan, which was supposed to have been given away on the evening of July 4th. The band's orchestra will be on hand to furnish the syncopation for the dancing, which will follow the concert.

Miss Kathleen Wynnot has been a recent guest of her aunt, Mrs. James Shannahan, of Hancock street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Hanley of Berlin, N. H., have been recent guests of their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Dunton, of Franklin street.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Bowers and Walter Stearns are on a two weeks' automobile trip to New York.

Mrs. David Murdoch arrived Tuesday of last week to spend the summer with her sister-in-law, Mrs. George Phillips, of Urquhart street, Stratglass Park. Mrs. Phillips, who recently submitted to a surgical operation, is slowly recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Gilpatrick of Milton, Vt., are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a girl, who has been named Pauline Fellows Gilpatrick. Mrs. Gilpatrick is at the home of her mother, Dr. Laura Noyes, on Erchie street for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bolvin of Waldo street are the happy parents of a 10 pound girl.

The rooms above the store of Max Greenburg on Congress street have been leased by the local Republican committee, and will be used as permanent quarters until after the campaign in the fall.

Miss Gates, a toilet specialist, is at the store of the Rumford Drug Company this week, demonstrating the Jodel toilet requisites.

Mrs. Nelson Bushley and family and Miss Dolly Lee are spending a few weeks at the McGraw camps at South Hangeley.

Mrs. Fred E. Rendall is entertaining a house party at her summer home at Falmouth Forelands for a month. The same company were there last year, and includes Mrs. Eudora Ames, Mrs. Geo. B. McMennamin and Mrs. Leo Schenauer, together with the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Howard (Miss Bernice Steinfeld) who have been located in Panama for several years past, are soon to come to Berlin, N. H., to make their home. Mr. Phillip Steinfeld and Mr. Howard will locate in business in Berlin.

A recent wedding was that of Peter Roy and Miss Mary Katherine Roy, which took place at St. John's church, Rev. Fr. Bolvin officiating. The witnesses were Lawrence Poulin and Madeline Lovett.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hancourt, who have been living in one of the Graver apartments on Main avenue, have moved into a rent on Virgin street in the Virginia District.

Judge and Mrs. James B. Stevenson and son, Shirley, are enjoying life at Workley Pond, where the Judge is having a camp built.

A recent marriage is that of Miss Jessie Anna Goodfellow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Goodfellow of New Castle, N. H., and Mr. Gilmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Gilmore of Urquhart street, Stratglass Park. The bride was very attractive in a dress of white satin, with white hat, and carrying a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaid was an intimate friend of the bride, Miss Lydia Penley, who wore a peach colored organdy dress and hat to match, and carried carnations. The bridegroom was attended by William Brown, a cousin. The gift of the bride from her husband was a diamond pendant, and to the best man, a pair of diamond set cuff links. The bridesmaid received a gold evergreen pen. Mr. Gilmore and his bride left by auto for New Brunswick for their honeymoon trip. Mrs. Gilmore is traveling in a suit of navy blue and hat to match with squirrel neckpiece. Mr. Gilmore and his best man were both born in Scotland, and he is now a machine tender at the Oxford mill. The bride is a graduate nurse of the McCarty Hospital, and is now employed as nurse at the Continental paper and bag mill. She plans to continue her work for a time at least. They will for the present reside at the home of the bridegroom's parents on Urquhart street.

The death of Arthur Pellerin, son of Mrs. Ella Pellerin of River street, occurred last week from diphtheria.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Homingway have purchased a new Buick car.

Mrs. Dickson has gone to the Wabanek Hotel at Jefferson, N. H., for the summer to work as waitress.

Ward and Ruth Dickson are spending two weeks in Berlin, N. H.

The wedding of Emilia Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fisher of Franklin street, and Miss Marie A. Carrigan took place last week at Gently, Canada. They are spending their honeymoon at Rangeley Lakes.

Stanley Galvanski of Pine street is at home from the Tufts Dental College for the summer vacation.

The death of A. Lemieux occurred last week at the McCarty Hospital from injuries received a few days before while sawing wood, when a piece of wood which he was saving struck him in the stomach.

Surpassing all expectations the two days' celebration staged July 8th and 9th by the Napoleon Oullette Post, American Legion of Rumford, proved to be a holiday carnival of patriotism and joy making intermingled. The celebration proved a success from all angles, and the local post announced with a great deal of pleasure and gratitude that they realized a very substantial sum of money. The various stores were gaily decorated for the occasion.

Miss Laura E. Hutchins, who has received her training as a nurse at the McCarty Hospital, passing the State Board examination successfully this May, is now substituting at the Continental paper and bag mill as nurse in the absence of the regular nurse.

Among the contracts recently awarded by the State Highway Commission for the construction of roads and bridges were: Town of Wilton, 35 miles gravel, James H. Kerr of Rumford, $17,535.50. Town of Canton, project No. 32, 4.032 miles gravel, James H. Kerr of Rumford, $46,101.35.

Word has recently been received of the death of a former Rumford woman, Mrs. Ella Lamb Douglas, wife of Goodwill Douglas, which occurred on June 23 at the King's Daughters Hospital in Oakland, Calif. She had been in ill health for some time past. She is survived by her husband and two children, George Douglas and Mrs. Marie Douglas Dunham, also two sisters, all residing in Berkeley, Calif. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas were among the early settlers of Rumford, and resided here for about ten years, then moving to St. Andrews, N. B., where they lived until about two years ago, when they moved to California on account of Mrs. Douglas' health.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hardy are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a seven pound daughter. Mrs. Hardy was formerly Miss Marie Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Thomas. During the month of August the church of St. Barnabas will be closed, when the rector, Rev. Aubrey Gilmore, will take charge of the services of the Mission church at Rangeley.

The services at the Universalist church have been discontinued until the fifth of September, the pastor, Rev. Allen Brown, having gone to his camp on Spectacle Island in Lake Winnepesaukee.

The Elks new cafeteria opened on Monday of this week.

Origeno Fillault, Past Exalted Ruler of the Elks of Rumford, is in Atlantic City, attending the Grand Lodge sessions.

Ruth and Avis Hinds, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hinds of Lochness road, are the guests of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hinds, of Livermore Falls.

Ward and Ruth Dickson are spending two weeks in Berlin, N. H.

To My Friends
MR. AND MRS. CHASE
On Their 50th Anniversary

Fifty years is a short while
In the history of the world;
Fifty years will be as nothing
When eternity is unfurled.
Fifty years! 'Tis a cycle of improvement

In science, in learning, and arts,
And brings changes of serious nature
To all thinking, human hearts.

But fifty years is a long while
For two to journey together
Over life's path to go hand in hand,
Through rough, or sunny weather.

To start the trip when both were young,
When your hearts beat fast with pleasure,
And to work and plan to build a home
With no time for idle leisure.

To raise a family, and teach them well
All the things they have to learn;
Of gentleness, thrift and Godliness,
"Nor to take what they do not earn."

Oh! 'Tis fine upon line to teach a child,
To be unselfish and true,
And you've done your best in a quiet way
And the Lord has prospered you.

Now you have come to a quiet time
When you may stop and rest;
For the birds have flown to homes of their own
And left the old home nest.

And here among friends and children
In the heart of this little town,
You may live at peace with God and man
Till life's journey you both lay down.

And in the hereafter may we,
Who have met with you oft on the way,
Meet and greet one another again
Where 'tis one eternal day.

JULY 3rd 1922

Listen! What is in the air that seems to say,
This is Charles and Mary's wedding anniversary.

Fifty years ago, young Charles he did decide
To make Miss Mary Brooks his lawful bride.

With horse and wagon where he abode
They soon were dashing on the road.

On, they went, to Bethel town,
Where the parson soon was found,
Joseph Dutton by name, full of life,
Soon pronounced them man and wife.

Back to Upton then they came,
She brought with her, her new name,
Fifty long years since the day they came,
But it is Charles and Mary just the same.

Two lovely girls God gave to you,
Both noble women, good and true,
One married Douglas, the other West,
I'm sure I can't tell which is the best.

Two grandsons are here today,
Cleveland and Howard I must say.

But, look! What is it here I see,
A great grandson on Charlie's knee,
A bright smart lad, one of the best,
And his name is Jerald West.

God has blessed you in basket and in store,
Dear friends there is just one thing more.

If, when the hostman comes this way
We can truly, honestly say,
At the setting of the sun
Our Heavenly Father they will be done.

NEW MAP OF MAINE

Just Issued by the United States Geological Survey—Shows Power Stations and Transmission Lines used in Public Utilities

Map of Maine on a scale of 1:500,000, showing the location of the power stations and transmission lines used in public service and the names of the public utility companies, has just been published by the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior.

The information in regard to the stations and transmission lines of public utility companies is shown in red on the new base map of Maine, on a scale of 1:500,000, which has been prepared in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture in connection with the construction of highways under the Federal road act. The map can be purchased from the Director of the United States Geological Survey for 50 cents, or the base map without the information in regard to public utility companies for 25 cents.

This map is one of a series of State power maps now being published by the Geological Survey. Similar maps are now available for New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Vermont, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Virginia, and Indiana, and copies may be purchased from the Geological Survey for 50 cents each.

These maps are valuable to those who are interested in the inter-connection of power plants, to those who wish to establish manufacturing plants within reach of electric power, and to municipal

WHY THAT LAME BACK?

That morning lameness—those sharp pains when bending or lifting, make work a burden and rest impossible. Don't be handicapped by a bad back—look to your kidneys. You will make no mistake by following this Bethel resident's example.

F. B. Merrill, Main St., says: "Whenever my kidneys become sluggish in action or my back gets to hurting, I resort to Doan's Kidney Pills, which I never fail to bring relief. I have been following the lumbering business for years and exposure and taking cold I blame for my kidney trouble. I had backache so bad I couldn't do a tap of work. The pains across my back and kidneys completely put me past going and my kidneys wouldn't act regularly. At times the secretions passed too often, then again, were scanty and painful and I couldn't rest nights. After I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills relief followed."

pallies that contemplate the use of electricity for light and power. Professional Paper 123 of the United States Geological Survey, entitled, "A Superpower System for the Region between Boston and Washington," states in general that it has been found that industrial establishments which require 500 horsepower or less can purchase power more economically than they can generate themselves. A study of nearly 200 steam-electric plants in the "superpower zone" indicates that the quantity of fuel they consume ranges from 6.23 pounds per kilowatt hour for the small plants to 2.14 pounds per kilowatt-hour for plants that have a capacity of more than 100,000 kilowatts. Even more striking is the variation in the cost of maintenance, labor, and supply, which amounts to $23.10 per kilowatt-year of effective capacity for small plants but only $5.46 for plants of more than 100,000 kilowatts. In all but a very few instances it was found to be more economical for plants of less than 200 horsepower to purchase all the energy they require, regardless of their requirements for heating. Almost the same is true for plants of 200 to 500 horsepower. It is only in plants that are larger than 500 horsepower and that have some special requirements for heating that the independent generation of power can be justified. Even in these plants the power supply and demand cannot be completely balanced, and the central-station connections should be available for taking up irregularities. Experience has shown that in plants using purchased power much of the fuel formerly used to supply heat in industrial processes can be saved through the simplification of heating arrangements by the elimination of power production.

These State maps, which show the location of the transmission lines of public-service companies, may be of use to companies or municipalities in indicating the possibilities for the purchase of power.

THE IMPROVED ASPIRIN TABLET

Laxo Aspirin

Aspirin is prescribed by physicians more often than any other drug. It is safe and quick relief from congestion, pain and fever. LAXO-ASPIRIN is the most scientific aspirin tablet, it is gently laxative, cleansing the system of poisons which are often the cause of pain. Does not cause heartburn or indigestion as ordinary aspirin does. Breaks up a cold—removes the acid and relieves the pain of headache, neuritis and lumbago. Brings almost instant relief in headache and neuralgia. Ask your druggist for TINGLES' LAXO-ASPIRIN in the three-point box, or mailed postpaid for 25c. Some Habits of Weas.

Weas feed on almost any animal food they can find, living or dead. They are especially fond of carrion. It is believed that weas spawn but once in their lives and die soon after their first spawning period. Large weas migrate toward the sea in the fall. In the spring small transparent eels of two inches in length and upwards are common on the shore under stones.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Bethel Troop
Saturday the troop planned its first hike. At quarter past one we started from the rooms over Howe's store. Only four had arrived at that time, Ted Swan, Perl Tripp, Charles Haselton and Chub Merrill. These four and an Assistant Scoutmaster decided to go to Songo Pond. Perl Tripp passed his fire building test with high honors as he only used one match and the rain was pouring down in torrents. Ted Swan easily swam fifty yards, thereby passing his swimming test. After supper, owing to the rain, we were glad to accept a chance to ride home offered to us by Mr. Durell. All agreed that we had a fine time and hope that we may go again.

The Best Test of a Play.
If I were a dramatist I would tell the plots of my plays to a child under nine years old. If his interest wavered, I would despair; if I could hold him wide-eyed, I should hope. Moller chose his cook for such a purpose—be sure she had the child-like mind. It is in the hour before or after bedtime that you will find our critic most receptive. You have in him then a first-night audience, and his "Go on!—what happened then?" will be your best applause.—W. M. Letta in the Yale Review.

To the Secretaries of Lodges Fire Companies

AND ALL OTHER ORGANIZATIONS

THIS paper has a plan which we think will be helpful and also save expense to your organization. Postal cards cost one cent each, and in addition to the cost of printing it takes a great deal of your time to address these cards for mailing. Why not advertise your meetings in the newspaper like sample advertisement below? This advertisement you can insert in this paper for $1.00 for one issue. Oftentimes you cannot reach your members through the mail because the time is too short. With the newspaper you can reach them the same night. Everybody reads it and they would look for these advertisements.

We think this plan will save you money, and we are sure it will save you a great deal of labor. If the organizations in this city join this plan it will be a great success and it will relieve all the secretaries of a great deal of work. Won't you bring this matter before your association and have some action taken?

Mrs. JOHN JONES, Secretary

"At any rate, the high cost of living is no problem in the South Sea Islands."
"It would be, if several thousand average Americans were suddenly transported to those islands and forced to live there."
"What do you mean?"
"It wouldn't be six months before somebody would corner the coconut market."

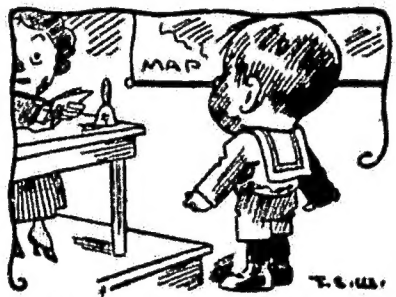

Started Early.
"You say Meddling is a born reformer?"
"Just that."
"What do you mean by a born reformer?"
"I have it on the authority of his grandmother that when he was five years old, he started a campaign in his neighborhood to abolish Mother Goose."

Careful Calculation.
"I understand you have been offered a large salary to go into motion pictures."
"I have," replied Senator Sorghum.
"But I'm not going. I like to keep up with my surroundings and large as the offer seems to be it wouldn't be enough to enable me to keep the motion picture social pace."

What is Bad Luck?
"Oh, I just bust a lookin' glass. I'm going to have seven years' bad luck."
"I don't believe that, 'cause a friend of mine bust one an' she never had no seven years' bad luck. It was only three days later she was killed in an explosion—so I wouldn't worry about it."—Life.

The Noes Have It.
His addresses having been declined by a young lady, he paid court to her sister.

"How much you resemble your sister," said he, the evening of his first call. "You have the same hair, the same forehead, and the same eyes."
"And the same noes!" added the girl quickly.—London Telegraph.

Teacher—With steak at 45 cents a pound what would four pounds and a half cost?
Johnny—They wouldn't come to our house.

GOSSIP

"It's not in the least fair to gossip," said little Master Hop-Toad, also known as Master American Toad, sadly.
"Who has been gossiping?" asked little Miss Toad.
"Oh, some of the usual ones," said little Master American Toad, sadly.
"You know we do so much good work. The gardeners all know that. Yes, gardeners know that and they like us and appreciate the very fine work we do. But so many people will persist in that old gossip story about the warts that we give."

"We don't give warts. I remember a little girl who had so many toads in her garden. They were like pets and they did work hard to destroy the bad insects which wanted to destroy her flowers."

"Well, she handled her toads all the time and never a wart did she have, and another little friend of hers, who wouldn't touch toads, had warts, and was always telling this little girl not to handle her toads."

"Warts will just come if they're going to come, and if they're not going to come they're not going to—but in any case it's not our family, or toads of any kind, who bring them. I know that. And so do others who really know and understand toads."

"I do hate gossip. It is so hard to put a stop to it. So very, very hard. Once a story gets started it seems to keep on going, whether it is true or not, and even when it isn't true it keeps on going."

"So one should be careful not to say anything unless one is very sure it's true, and it's never nice to talk about creatures, anyway."

"Oh, dear, oh, dear, how I do hate gossip! Gossip has always been very unfair to me."

"It has, it has indeed!" said little Miss Toad.

"But let us not think about that now," said Master Toad. "for I have

"The Wee Spring Peepers."
other things to think of, and the most important of all is the thought of you."

"You are such a lovely young toad, and I think we might be happy together. We can stay here in the water during the early spring, and then we can go to a garden I know, where every time the dear lady, who looks after the garden, sees a toad she is made very happy."

"Yes, she says: 'Oh, you dear little toad, how glad I am to see you!'"

"That is the place where we will go."

Young Miss Toad smiled her best toad smile.

"And together we will do what we can to put an end to the gossip," said Miss Toad.

"I heard that Mr. and Mrs. Fowler Toad were doing their best to put a stop to the story," said Master Toad.

"Perhaps in time no one will believe the story, so that if anyone starts anything about toads giving warts some one will at once speak up and say: 'Oh, don't tell that silly old story, which has no truth in it. Tell something that's true!'"

"Perhaps that day will come. We will do our best to bring it about."

"And as we don't give warts I should think we would bring it about before very long."

"And now I have a little song I want to sing to you."

So Master Toad sang his sweetest song to Miss Toad, and a very sweet, high toad song it was, trembling with love and affection.

Not far off, in a woodland stream, the wee spring peepers, or Pickering Frogs, were calling and talking and singing all the time.

"Peep, peep," they sang, over and over again. There were so many of them, and they were making a great noise, but no one could see them, for they were very, very small and were dark brown suits like the dead leaves in the woodland stream. They were shy and did not want to be seen."

But the Toads did not notice them. They had too much to talk about and think about without noticing anything else!

Made Cannibals Run.
"But the real thrill was when I made sixty cannibals run." He paused and waited for encouragement.

"How did you do that?"
"I ran and they followed."

DO WE NEED MEDICAL EXAMINATION IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

"In Maine there seems to be some difference of opinion as to the real value of medical examination of school children. When school physicians do not make examination till within a few weeks of graduation, one may question. The physical condition of the child is then at its lowest level. Examination at the beginning of the school year, when physical condition is at best, defects can be quickest remedied, as then vitality makes the child more responsive to treatment. Uncovering the physical defects of our school children also reveals the ignorance and indifference of many parents as to the welfare of their own children. Reports show improper food, next to infectious agencies, causes most troubles; and 'about as many from well-to-do, as from poor, families, suffer from malnutrition and its handicaps';—a story of parental ignorance. In two Maine towns whose records are probably typical, one had 367 pupils registered and only 34 without defect; the other 284 registrants with but 27 normal; and in the first town 11 out of 19 High School Seniors were under-nourished. But when school doctors assert that only 3% to 6% of parents heed their recommendations such indifference verges on the criminal.

"As it is desirable at any time to discover defects, medical examination should be assured; but when parents do not heed the doctor's advice, his work is all but wasted. Here experience shows one school nurse is worth several school physicians. The nurse can, but the doctor cannot, go into the home and watch need to see the family doctor early. If any community cannot have both, at least a school nurse should be secured.

"But, valuable as school medical examination is," continues the Secretary of the Maine Baby Saving Society, "if we start there we begin several years too late. School medical examination, properly conducted, should reveal incipient disease and help prevent, or at least limit, epidemics.

"Since many, yes most, of the ailments discovered are of several years standing, the most effective child health work must be begun in the pre-school age. And since the first year and a half of life is a potent factor in deciding the character of our health for life, reason dictates infancy as the proper time for starting real health work. This should mean periodic physical examination of babies, either by the clinic or the family doctor, with intelligent instruction of parents, together with a demonstration in proper baby care, by a competent child welfare nurse." The Secretary would "continue school medical examinations for some years to come, but" he also urges "we should begin not later than the day of birth to look after and try to safeguard the health of the child. The prospective mother should be given special instructions and care, for at least several months before the birth, with probability of a healthier baby, and greater likelihood of proper care of the infant. Have we not been too long content with curing ill? Why not prevent them?" "Pre-school health work, efficiently done, ought to encourage health habits, and develop health conditions, which in time will make school medical examinations valuable as preventive measures only; not, as now, chiefly to correct ill conditions in child life neglected, or ignorantly cared for, during the pre-school, and most susceptible, age."

THE SECOND FIDDLE

In Which the Powerful Influence of Example Does Much to Develop Independence.

At the first sound of the step on the stone walk below, Kate Denny sprang to her feet. A delicate flush came to her cheeks and a new light in her eyes. She listened, standing motionless, until the whirr of the electric bell stirred her into life.

Hurriedly she crossed the room to her mirror, and patted with shaking fingers the already smooth waves of her pale yellow hair. From the lace at her throat she tore the blue bow hastily, substituting a pink one—only to replace it almost at once with the blue. Her gown at back and waist and sleeves she touched tentatively with her still shaking fingers; when plainly nothing else could be done to make perfection more perfect, she turned and waited, her expectant eyes on the closed door leading from her chamber to the hall.

Two, three, five minutes passed. The subdued confusion of an entrance and the sound of voices had floated up from the hall below, but all was silent now. Three more minutes Kate Denny waited. Surprise, doubt, and a frightened questioning came in turn to her eyes; then resolution, as she softly crossed the room and opened the door.

A light laugh floated up the stairway, and a deeper note answered. The girl drew back, half closing the door.

Then it was true. He had come, and she had not been summoned to go down. Edith was there, however—that light laugh had been hers. . . . So it was to be the old story over again. If Edith wanted it, she must have it, whether it were a jam tart or the exclusive attention of an evening caller.

Always it had been like that; and always she, Kate, had taken the subordinate place, together with the smaller part.

Resolutely Kate Denny opened the door wider and took one step into the hall.

Well, why not? That was John Kennison down there. He had come to see her.

Irresolutely the girl still stood debating the matter, when the twang of a violin string came from the room below and seemed to end all hesitation. With swift steps and heightened color, Kate Denny tripped down the stairs and entered the brightly lighted living-room. John Kennison rose at once, an almost boyish eagerness in his glance. Edith Denny turned slowly. Her eyes carried a barely perceptible annoyance.

Oh, here's Kate," she said. "You're just in time, Kate, to turn the music." John Kennison played first violin in a large city orchestra. He stood now close to the piano; his instrument in his hand, and his eyes longingly fixed on Kate Denny.

"It's a concerto. I was going to try it a bit," he began eagerly. "You know, I brought the piano score last week. You said you'd—"

"Yes, it's right here, Mr. Kennison," interrupted Edith, brightly. "And we'd love to play it with you. Come, Kate."

For one brief instant Kate almost rebelled. John Kennison had asked her to practice that score, and she had practiced it for hours at a time until it was at her finger tips; yet she was expected to stand patiently by and turn the leaves for Edith.

"But, Edith," hesitated Kate, "don't you think it would be better if I—"

"Nonsense! of course you can turn the music, Kate," laughed her sister, airily. "Don't be so timid! Come."

It was not a success—the playing of that concerto. From start to finish it was an agonizing scramble on the part of each player to find and keep step with the other. At the conclusion Edith laughed hysterically, Kate bit her lips in open confusion, and John Kennison reached for his handkerchief to wipe the perspiration from his face.

A moment later Edith suggested that they try a popular love song to which she knew the accompaniment; and with a fervent "Yes, do, if you please!" the man raised his violin to position.

For half an hour then Kate sat in a corner and listened to ragtime, and to the brilliant sallies of her sister Edith, who was entertaining John Kennison. A little later, Kate was brought in—cake that Edith said she had made; and at the words Kate thought of the kitchen that morning with Edith, dainty in a fresh frock, standing at the shelf, stirring gingerly at a concoction, not one ingredient of which had been put in without minute instructions from the elder sister.

After the cake had been eaten and duly praised, there was more music, then John Kennison rose to go home. He said good-by, and looked at Kate lovingly; but before she could answer, Edith interposed a merry question; and it was Edith who went with him to the door, and who asked him to come again.

In her own room that night Kate Denny confronted the thing squarely. Behind set teeth she said:

"I will not give up John Kennison. . . . I will have him—play with me and kiss me!"

Then, alone, in the dark, she blushed

the Denny's the "Philharmonic" was always "John Kennison's orchestra," and as such its concerts were enthusiastically welcomed. Tonight, however, there was no animation, no joy in Kate Denny's face as she dressed herself; nor did even the anticipatory rustle and hum of the concert room itself bring an answering flash or sparkle as she waited for the first number on the programme.

This was her mood when a chance conversation between two men in front of her aroused a mild sort of interest. "Who is that long-haired, dreamy-eyed creature caressing his fiddle as if it were the dear child of his heart?" asked one man of the other.

Almost unconsciously Kate Denny turned her head to catch the reply. She, too, had often idly wondered about that particular dreamy-eyed violinist.

"That? Oh, that's Bronoffsky."

"Queer-looking chap! Good player?" "Um—well, yes, he is. Still—he's only a second fiddle up there, you know. He plays second violin." There was a moment's pause, then, half musically, the voice went on: "Do you know, it's rather funny about that fellow, Bronoffsky. He is possessed and consumed by one mad ambition; he wants to lead, direct—be a conductor, you know."

"Well, why doesn't he?" "Bronoffsky lead! Jove, man, he couldn't! Bronoffsky's a dreamer, not a doer. He can play, sure—second fiddle. But he hasn't the audience sense; he doesn't know how to handle men. He doesn't know how to hold thirty, forty, fifty instruments at the tip of a little black stick. All his life he's been controlled, not in control. All his life he's done another's will, not his own. Great Scott! man, Bronoffsky is—just what you see, a first-rate second fiddle!"

There was a burst of applause—the leader of the Philharmonic had appeared on the platform. A moment later came the electric hush that followed the tap of the conductor's baton; then sounded a long, quivering note from the first violins.

But all this Kate Denny neither saw nor heard. Behind the two men who had talked of Bronoffsky she sat tense and motionless, her eyes staring straight ahead, her ears heaving only the words that had just been spoken: "All his life he's been controlled, not in control. All his life he's done another's will, not his own. Bronoffsky is—just what you see, a first-rate second fiddle!"

So that was all she saw, or could ever hope to be—a second fiddle.

Suddenly, now, Kate Denny became conscious of the music from the platform. It had dropped to pianissimo, yet clearly, sweetly, the melody still ran through it like a silver thread.

Fainter and yet more faint it grew, until only an airy, swaying cobweb of sound floated from the leader's baton.

There was a moment's breathless hush, then deafening applause. In her seat Kate Denny relaxed suddenly. With the strain of that perfect music still in her ears, she declared to herself that only selfishness, pure selfishness, had made her rebel at getting Edith's breakfast, washing Edith's dishes, and eating Edith's biscuits; and only selfishness again had grudged Edith the sleigh-ride with John Kennison that afternoon. This was not, indeed, exactly a new course of reasoning for Kate Denny to pursue. She had argued along the same lines before. But tonight, especially, still under the sway of those marvelously blended harmonies, she could see nothing but well-deserved failure for any second fiddle who attempted to assert his own individuality.

One by one the days came and went. To Edith and her mother they seemed not unlike many other days long passed. To Kate, Denny they were hardly dissimilar, except, perhaps, for the growing frequency of John Kennison's visits. Not that she herself saw so much of him, but that she knew he was there, and that his presence began to mean so much to her that she was frightened.

Very conscientiously these days Kate Denny was tending to Edith the crisp brown of the biscuits, and the exclusive attentions of John Kennison—both of which Edith claimed as her rights.

One day, when Kate almost rebelled; when she declared to herself that it was not strange, or unwomanly, or even selfish that she should not like always to be doing the drudgery, or always to be giving up her will about every little matter, or always to be handing over to another woman the flowers, drives, calls, and candy that seemed originally intended for herself. But invariably, even though inwardly she did rebel, outwardly she was still the self-sacrificing, self-effacing sister.

As it chanced, it was after a day of this inward rebellion that Kate Denny went once again with her family to a concert by the Philharmonic. There was the same anticipatory hum and stir in the audience, but on the stage—on the stage, even Kate could see that something unusual had happened, or was about to happen. One by one the musicians were taking their places, but not in the quiet, orderly way that was customary. They were plainly hurried, nervous, excited. One stumbled against a music-rack, and another dropped his bow to the floor. Some talked earnestly together; others sat silently apart, an odd look almost like disdain on their faces. Bronoffsky, for whom Kate looked at once, was nowhere to be seen. She was wondering at this, when unexpectedly John Kennison appeared in the aisle by her seat.

"I came down a minute to tell you," he began excitedly in a low voice. "Last night Rosal—the leader, you know—was thrown out of his auto and hurt rather badly. Kepple, the concert master, was with him, and he was knocked out, too, for tonight. And what do you think?—Rosal sent word that Bronoffsky—Bronoffsky should conduct tonight!"

"Who's Bron—Bron—what's his name?" demanded Edith, pettishly. And Kate, to whom John Kennison's words had been addressed, for once rejoiced in her sister's interposition, so oddly stirred was she herself at John Kennison's words.

"Why, he's one of the second violins, second violins," repeated Kennison, "tall, long-haired chap with big black eyes. You'll remember when you see him, I must go, but I wanted to tell you," hurried the man, turning again to Kate, "something's going to happen, but just what, I don't know. He's been putting us through our paces all the morning, and—well, you'll see," flung back Kennison as he hurried away.

Five minutes later the orchestra were all in their places; then from the wings stepped a tall, dark-haired man, and Kate Denny's heart gave a heavy, suffocating throb. A patter of hand-clapping greeted the man's appearance, but almost instantly died into silence—the claps had been intended for Rosal—and this man was not Rosal. Kate Denny, watching him with suspended breath, wondered if he cared.

The man himself did not look as if he cared, or as if he even heard. With head and shoulders erect he was looking for the stand. His face was white, and his jaw firm-set; but there was that in his eyes that caused the girl to glow suddenly as with hidden fire. For a tense instant Bronoffsky, motionless upon his stand, faced his orchestra; then slowly he raised his baton.

True to John Kennison's prophecy, something did happen that evening. The orchestra knew that never before had they played as they were playing now—with such passion, such power, such a oneness of purpose.

The audience knew only that never before had they heard forty instruments sound so exactly as one.

The critics talked enthusiastically of the new leader who had that night been born. From their lips dropped learned phrases. He did not overdrive his orchestra; he sought no undue din of brass and drum; he was careful of the quality as well as the quantity of tone; he had balance, poise, power; he ordered the pace of his music judiciously, and he moulded his phrases with a masterly hand.

And yet—neither orchestra nor audience nor learned critics were quite so much moved as was a certain young woman in an orchestra chair nine rows from the front. Her head was erect, her eyes were shining like stars, and her mouth was curved in a smile that some way seemed to carry an elation all out of proportion to any cause. For, had you asked her, she would have said that it was all because of one Leon Bronoffsky, second violinist, who that night had led the orchestra.

For Edith Denny that evening there came two surprises. One surprise was when she found herself unconsciously walking out of the concert hall with her mother, while ahead Kate and John Kennison walked together.

The second surprise came later, when Kate, nearly ready for bed, appeared at the connecting door between their rooms.

"Edith," began Kate cheerfully, "I'm going to close this door tonight. I want my window open, and you don't, you know; so if I close the door we'll both be satisfied. Goodnight." And she shut the door.

For one amazed instant Edith stood and stared at the closed door; then she darted forward, her hand reaching for the knob.

"Why, Kate, what are you thinking of, when you know I never sleep without that door open," she cried. "The next moment she fell back weakly—the door was locked. 'Why, Kate?'"

There was no answer, but a moment later there came from Kate's room a little tremulous melody that sounded for all the world like the whistle of a small boy who is trying to keep up his courage in the dark.

Long after Edith had gone peacefully to bed, the melody still haunted her, but she could not place it, until the opening phrase of the overture that the orchestra had played first that night under the new leader's direction.

BOSTON MARKET REVIEW

For Week Ending July 7, 1922

Prepared by U. S. Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates

BRIGHTON LIVE STOCK AND DRESS-ED MEAT MARKET

Light receipts, strong western prices made local offerings steady on most all classes of livestock. Good and Medium steers and oxen $6.00-6.50 few choice $6.50 per 100 lbs. Butcher cattle, cows and heifers 4.00-7.00 few choice 7.50. Bulls, under moderate supply weak at 4.50-5.50. Hogs under light supply were firm with bulk going at 12.25-12.75 per 100 lbs. Lamb receipts shorter than week ago with quality improving. Choice lambs 27.00-30.00 with medium kinds 25.00-26.00. Pork under fair demand and moderate receipts steady. Today 8/10 loins 10.00-20.00, 10/12 18.00-19.00. Old lots to freezer in order to clear supplies of lighter averages. Poultry steady with 4/6 average 16.00-16.50 per 100 lbs.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Liberal supplies, good buying demand and no marked price trend in either direction. Maryland and Delaware trans-piration apples lower at $1.50-2.00 bu. basket. Native asparagus unchanged, 8.00-9.00 bu. box for field run and 5.50-6.00 for extra fancy. Native string beans lower at 1.25-1.50 bu. box. Penna. blueberries 20-25c. native blueberries 30-35c. California tomatoes higher at 50-60c a crate. Southern water-melons steady at 35-50c each for melons averaging 24-28 lbs in weight.

DAIRY AND POULTRY PRODUCTS

Butter market has been unsettled the past week with prices low on western extras today at 37½c and northern extras 38-38½c. Supplies have been liberal on all grades except 91-93 score butter which is scarce. Medium and under grades are in liberal supply and accumulating. Buyers willing to shade prices in order to clean up this class of goods but are holding firm on 81-82 score. Most all marks arriving this week are below their usual quality as they are showing the effect of the heat. Cheese market has ruled steady to firm the past week with more activity to trading. The bulk of the demand and trading has been on York State Twins around 22-24c. Daisies and Young Americans very active and selling 21-22c. Egg market holds about steady with the bulk of the trading on current receipts. Buyers want fine quality eggs and as fine eggs are hard to move. Current receipts 24-25c with grades receipts up to 26c. Trades and Dishes 21-22c. Nearby hennessy selling 37-38c with fancy broilers hennessy up to 42c. Dressed poultry market dull with prices slightly lower. Native fowl ranging from 28-32c today. Broilers 40-44c. Live poultry quiet on broilers at 21-24c but fowl holding steady at 25-28c.

Mrs. Mary Ann Pierce Thompson, the "grand, old lady" of Winthrop, Mass., and one of the oldest residents of Greater Boston, celebrated the 102d anniversary of her birth June 27.

The age limit for applicants to the Citizens' Military Training Camp at Camp Devens has been changed. Hereafter boys who are now 16 and will reach the age of 17 during the month of August may apply for training.

A master's report filed in superior court Springfield, Mass., in the suit of the Chapman and Brooks company against George W. Lawrence, a former bookkeeper and his wife, for an accounting, declared that in the period 1911 and 1919 Lawrence improperly took $25,414 of the firm's funds. Lawrence, the report says, was first employed by the firm dealers in hardware at a salary of $15 a week and that at no time did his pay exceed $22 a week. It is stated in the report that Lawrence maintained an expensive home and that the money taken was used in the upkeep of his home and the payment of bills contracted by his wife and that his wife must have known that the firm's funds were being taken.

Connecticut valley truck gardeners and tobacco growers face the prospect of losing thousands of dollars as a result of the long continued rainy spell that has kept the ground continually soaked for weeks. The owner of one of the largest market gardens along the river bank at Riverdale reports that two-thirds of his entire crop is coated with mildew and that the roots of plants are beginning to rot. Tobacco growers in Westfield, Mass., where the American Sumatra Company has extensive fields, reports that tobacco plants are beginning to rot. In Connecticut the lowlands are an inch under water. Potato crops in many places are submerged and when the water recedes it will be necessary to plant crops over again. Onion crops, both in Massachusetts and Connecticut, have suffered seriously and many of these tender seedlings will have to be re-set.

After being rescued from drowning on three separate occasions Frederick Rosevalley is still enjoying the luxury of living. On June 10 Rosevalley fell off the end of Custom House Wharf, Portland, and was rescued by a shoreman. A few weeks later he fell into about three feet of water near the canoe house where he had been employed was pulled out and apparently felt none the worse for his experiences. The other day he pitched from the top of a dam below the Stroudwater Canoe Club and fell about 10 feet.

PARAGRAPHS FOR THE NEW ENGLANDER

News of General Interest From the Six States

It is unofficially stated in Bar Harbor that President Harding will spend a part of his vacation this year at that place, coming about the middle of August in the presidential yacht, Mayflower.

Attorney J. Arthur Baker of Pittsfield, Mass., who was mentioned recently in connection with the Republican nomination for member of the Governor's Council, has announced his candidacy for State auditor.

The first American to obtain the right to practice before the Spanish bar is Joachim David Rickard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Rickard of 19 Highland avenue, Haverhill, Mass., who recently passed all law examinations at Madrid University.

Counsel for Emil Schutte sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ball and their son Jacob in Haddam, Conn., in 1915, has filed with the clerk of the superior court a petition for a new trial for Schutte. The petition is returnable before Judge Kellogg, Sept. 5.

While Imelda Durack, daughter of Mrs. Imelda Durack of Springfield, Mass., was watching the Fourth of July parade, an unknown person came up behind her and clipped off five long, beautiful curls. The act was performed so deftly that the girl was unable to say just when she lost her curls.

Thirty miniature spruce and fir trees, exactly two feet high, have been shipped to Chittanooga by State Chamber of Commerce to figure as a background for camping exhibit which will be arranged by the Maine delegation as a feature of the national convention of business and professional women's clubs.

Lt.-Col. Frederick W. Stopped, U. S. A., in charge of national guard affairs in New England, has announced from headquarters of the 1st corps area, that 500 officers and 8800 soldiers of the national guard of the New England states have gone into summer encampment at various places in New England Saturday.

According to a ruling made by the Rt. Rev. Thomas M. O'Leary, bishop of the Springfield, Mass., diocese non-Catholics contemplating marriage to Catholics in that diocese must take a six-weeks' course of instruction in Catholic doctrine before a dispensation permitting the marriage will be granted.

E. D. Howe, formerly master of the State Grange, says farmers in Massachusetts have been put back three weeks on account of the rain. Already there is a scarcity of garden products. The most noticeable of these are green peas. Very small quantities of these are in the market, and they bring a high price.

Massachusetts Commissioner of Corrections, Sanford Bates, in a recent statement places the 1921 population of the State's prison at 2321 whereas, during the "wet" years of 1914-17, the population averaged 6100. Arrests in 1914 for violation of the automobile laws totalled 4200, whereas in 1921 there were 18,068.

Forcing a window on the westerly side of the building which gave access to the foyer, crackmen succeeded in ripping away two locks on the door leading to the box office at J. F. Kelly's Theatre, Portland. Before they had opportunity to rifle the safe or inspect the contents of the office, they were frightened away.

The Netherlands Indies, with a population of 47,000,000, offer practically a virgin territory to American manufacturers for trade in cotton, shoes, machinery and paper, according to John A. Fowler, American trade commissioner, who recently returned from a survey of conditions there and is now in Boston to confer with New England business men.

At the very spot where his father won a medal by saving a girl's life 22 years ago, 12-year-old Thomas J. Fern, Jr., Hibernia, Mass., saved the life of 8-year-old Philip Gancello. Thomas J. Fern, Sr., on the Fourth of July, 22 years ago, in an identical manner, saved the life of Agnes Kevin, also of Hibernia, and was presented with a medal.

"Less than one-half the school teachers of the United States ever attended high school and less than one-fifth of them had any special professional training to fit them for their positions," said Thomas E. Finigan, Pennsylvania superintendent of education, at the session of the National Education Association convention in Mechanics' Building, Boston.

An earnest effort to get every Republican voter of both sexes to the polls next September and to conduct a vigorous campaign in the meantime was decided upon at a meeting in Augusta, Me., of the Kennebec county Republican committee. Gov. Percival P. Baxter, Congressman John E. Nelson, State Chairman Robert J. Paddock of Litch and the majority of the candidates for county offices, were present. There was also a representative gathering of Republican women of the county.

WHY

Ducks Are Enabled to Shed Water From Their Backs

"Like water off a duck's back" is a phrase that we often use, for a duck's back is the most perfect waterproof
in the world.

Land birds are soon saturated by a heavy shower of rain. You may see them afterwards fluffing out their feathers so that sun and wind may dry them. But no drop of water can penetrate the plumage of any aquatic bird. Gulls, ducks, grebes, and cormorants dive after food on the bleakest days without getting either wet or cold.

These birds are provided with a natural mackintosh in the shape of a covering of feathers which fit tightly one on top of the other. But their plumage would not remain waterproof
if they did not look after it carefully.
Every feather must be greased at least once a day if it is to turn the water.

Watch a duck after its bath and you will see the process. The beak is pushed hard into the roots of the feathers, and then brought up to their very tips. Diving birds are provided with special glands which supply the beak with all the grease it needs.

SAYS ANIMALS DO REMEMBER

Why Old Idea Is Wrong Is Proved by Incidents Related by English Writer.

I have read an article in which a trapper denies that animals have a real memory, says a writer in the London Times. He admitted that most of them knew enough to avoid a trap after an experience or two with it, but contended that this was merely a manifestation of the self-preservation instinct.

The same man cited an instance—
not at all unfamiliar—of a dog's refusing to hunt with a man who had kicked him. He said that this too was only the instinct of all living creatures to avoid injury.

Animals do have memory—at least some of them do. The trapper's theory would not explain those many evidences of recollection wherein self-preservation plays no part. I once carried a fox-terrier into the house after he had been well-nigh killed by an automobile. His master had just moved into the apartment house, and I had never seen the dog before that
day. We moved away two days later, and I did not see the terrier for over four months. Then one day I passed the house—or was about to do so—when out came that dog, wagging his stubby tail. He jumped all over me,
in joyful recognition—and memory.

An amusing story, significant on this subject, is told by my father. As a boy he lived on a farm, and was always a close student of animal nature.
The mare he usually drove was old and fat, and would never go faster than a walk unless urged. There were two roads to town, one branching off from the other and a little shorter. It had been Old Man's custom to take this road, of her own volition, until on one occasion a vicious dog barked at her and snarled at her legs. After that the driver had to be on his guard;
Maud would speed up when about 50
yards from the turn-off and try to get
by it before she could be restrained.
This showed not only memory, but
a sense for planning.

Why Mirrors Become Clouded.
"These wintry and rainy days are sure tough for me," said the elevator man in an office building.

"How's that?" asked the casual passenger.

"Look at those mirrors on each side of the car," directed the elevator man.
"I have to wipe them off about every five minutes. On cold days the mirrors get fogged up, and on rainy days
—well, the rain washes the powder
off their noses. What's the result?
Every carload I take up crowds over near these mirrors, takes out the old powder puff and starts dishing. There's a bunch of them, you see, and by the time I reach the top floor the mirrors are so clouded with powder they don't reflect a thing."

"Except possibly feminine vanity," observed the casual passenger.

Why Malamute Dogs Are Scarce.
Malamute dogs, the half-wolf, half canine animals known as huskies, are selling in the North at $100 apiece
and up, according to returned hunters and prospectors. When the North is snow-bound and lakes and rivers are locked with ice against navigation,
travel is almost exclusively by dog-sled. The lowest price at which dogs can be obtained is $100 each, according to adepts. First-class animals, such as crack "mushers" prize themselves on keeping, are hard to get at any price, and when obtainable cost several hundred dollars, or as much as a good horse in the South.
Scarcity of dogs, it is said, is due to the neglect of breeding stock by the Indians.

Why the Turkey Died.
Mr. Smart did not allow his debtors much time to discharge their liabilities, and he had the attorney to call on a customer for the collection of a bill on Christmas day. "I have called,"
he began, "to ascertain when you intend to pay me the cash you owe?"
"Well, sir," replied the debtor, who was enjoying his Christmas dinner. "I am at the end of my resources; in fact,
I have nothing to pay anyone, and I can see no other remedy staring me
in the face."

"That being so, I fail to see why you should be enjoying the luxury of a turkey," added the creditor angrily.
"Alas," said the debtor mournfully,
"I couldn't afford its keep."

WOODPECKER HOUSES.

Houses for woodpeckers must be made with deep cavities like the hollowed tree-trunks and branches in which they nest. The little downy woodpecker requires a cavity extending about 8 inches below the doorway, measuring about 4 inches square on the bottom, and a doorway 1 1/2 inches

in diameter. The hairy woodpecker's house should have a cavity extending 12 to 15 inches below the doorway, measuring 6 inches square
on the bottom, and a doorway 1 1/2 inches in diameter. The red-head woodpecker requires the same size cavity
as the hairy woodpecker, but an entrance 2 inches in diameter. The flicker's house should have a cavity extending between 10 and 18 inches below the doorway, and a doorway 2 1/2 inches in diameter.

The houses in Figs. 1 and 2 were planned to accommodate flickers.
You can reduce the dimensions to suit
other species of woodpeckers.

Fig. 3 shows the framework of the house in Fig. 1. First, prepare top and bottom piece A by pattern in Fig. 6.

The curved front of the house is inclosed in tin. I used the sides of five tomato cans, lapping the edge of each strip 1/4 inch over the edge of the preceding strip. Tack the tin to strips
B with carpet tacks.

Prepare side pieces C (Fig. 2) after the front has been inclosed. In one piece cut the doorway in the position shown in Fig. 6. Cut roof board D (Fig. 6) by the pattern in Fig. 6, and nail it to top piece A with equal projections at the sides, and a rear projection to cover back board E. Prepare back board E by the pattern in Fig. 6, and hinge it to the rear edge of roof piece D with a pair of hinges.

Fig. 7 shows a detail of the perches. Sticks F and I are 3/4-inch dowel sticks. Cut blocks G and H of the dimensions given in Fig. 8. Bore a hole in bottom piece A to receive stick F, and nail through G into A.

The house in Fig. 2 is shown in cross-section in Fig. 9, with all parts labeled in a manner corresponding to that used on the patterns in Fig. 10.
Front and back boards A may be made of 1/2-inch stuff, sides B, roof boards G, floor D, and blocks F and H, should be cut out of 3/4-inch stuff. Cut the main parts before starting to assemble. First, nail the four sides together, then add the roof. Roof boards G must be mitered, or one piece lapped
over the edge of the other, at the ridge.
Cover the joint with a strip of tin.
Fasten floor D between the sides with screws, so it may be removed for house cleaning. The knob, made up of stick I and the block G, is held by nail I driven through the center into base D.

There are six brackets F to support boards E (Fig. 9). Fig. 2 shows the locations. Miter shelf boards H at the corners.

ation is this. During the war it was deemed advisable to place at the disposal of the American manufacturers
the formulas owned by Germans on preparations vital to the conduct of the war. Section 10 of the trading with the enemy act was enacted, giving the Federal Trade Commission power to license bonafide manufacturers to use these preparations, the patent rights,
however, to remain in the Government's hands and the licensees to pay over to the Government Treasury a certain percentage of their profits as royalties.

Also the Trade Commission had the power to fix the price for which these products could be sold.

Many licenses had been granted for this purpose when A. Mitchell Palmer then Alien Property Custodian conceived the idea of broadening the powers of the Government in handling these German patents and transferring their administration to his office. This was duly accomplished by enacting a law, a rider to an appropriation bill then pending, and the Alien Property Custodian was given the right to sell patents, copyrights, etc., which had been seized from the enemy. Licensing authority was transferred from the Federal Trade Commission to the Alien Property Custodian.

Former Attorney General Palmer,
members of the Federal Trade Commission, other high officials, and possibly even former President Wilson, as well as political leaders in both parties, appear likely to be called as witnesses
when the battle of German and American dyes takes place in court.

Attorney General Daugherty is evidently counting on making as much capital out of the dye issue as possible.
It has immense possibilities when it comes to gathering excitement among the American people. But those who are inclined to the belief that Daugherty is magnifying actual conditions say that the dye matter is not unlike hundreds of other cases where it was necessary to wipe out the Germans—only it happened to be the biggest and most spectacular event among the transactions.

SENATE MUST SPEED UP

There is a long calendar to dispose of before United States Senators will be ready to close shop for the summer.
The tariff bill, soldiers' bonus and the ship subsidy are all supposed to be passed and finished within a few weeks,
and from the schedules the accomplishment of all things on the program might seem impossible. But those who have watched the "night sessions" in former years know that the Senate is capable of producing high speed legislation,
and these old-time observers expect that the Administration and Republican program will be a completed volume before Congress goes home in September or October.

THE PRIMARY SNOWBALL

For many years politicians have been too timid to attack the primary election principle, but since President Harding and Secretary of War Weeks came out for the convention system, the little primary snowball has been growing and growing. According to the best political advisers in Washington the country is soon to be filled with an agitation for the return to the old method of nominating candidates. And naturally the new movement is charged up to the "old guard."

MASON

Work on the church was finished last Thursday.

The Blanchards have arrived at their summer home in town.

Zenna Mills of Albany has been helping his brother, E. C. Mills, shingle his house.

Elmer Grover attended Grange at Bethel,
Thursday evening.

Mrs. Eli Grover and children, who have been visiting relatives in Rumor, returned home Monday.

NEWBY

Miss Florence Johnson of South Paris
visited at Walter Powers' last Sunday, returning Monday.

Mrs. L. F. Bartlett of Bethel is staying a few days with friends in town.

Elmer Bailey and crew are cutting
J. W. Kilgore's hay and will also cut the hay at the hotel.

G. H. Learned and family were at Andover last Sunday.

MIDDLE INTERVALE ROAD

Mr. John Carter and family have returned from Canada.

Mrs. John Coulidge is spending a few days at W. B. Baker's.

Mrs. W. B. Baker and family, Mr.
Ara Burgess and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Coulidge,
the occasion being Mrs. Coulidge's birthday.

Mr. Walter Batentine is unable to attend to his duties at Crockett's Garage,
being confined to the house by illness.

"Watered Stock."
This is a commercial and financial term. To "water" stock is to enlarge or increase the number of shares of stock without a proportionate increase of paid in capital. "Watered stock"
means stock treated in the manner described.

BALTIMORE WOMAN'S MESSAGE TO MOTHERS

At 820 W. Hayward Ave., lives Mrs.
Henry Johnson, who a few weeks ago
wrote what may be termed a good message to all mothers. She said: "I have used Dr. True's Elixir for more than ten years and know it is good." She used
Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, to rid her children of worms. There is hardly a child but what needs Dr. True's Elixir, for they all usually have worms when growing up. Mrs. Johnson appreciates what Dr. True's Elixir accomplishes.
Your children will be in better health
through its use.

Symptoms to watch: Constipation,
offensive breath, slow fever, biliousness,
pains in stomach, red points on tongue,
swollen upper lip, starting during sleep.

CHAUTAUQUA AT BRYANT POND

The Radcliffe Chautauqua will open Saturday afternoon, July 15, and close on the evening of the 18th.

This Chautauqua was secured through the directors of the Woodstock Chamber of Commerce who signed for the same last October. The officers and directors of the local Chamber will serve as the Chautauqua committee and all proceeds above expenses will go for the benefit of the organization. The tent will be erected on the high school grounds
which is an ideal location for the same.

A rare musical and intellectual treat
is assured the citizens of this section of the county and it is hoped that the patronage may be such as to make the Chautauqua one of the annual events of the town.

MARSHALL DISTRICT

Miss Nina Briggs visited relatives and friends at Bethel last week.

Geo. Briggs and family spent the Fourth at Rumford and Dixfield.

Miss Campbell is working for Mrs.
Alton Paine.

Miss Nina Briggs went to No. Bridg-ton last Sunday, where she has employment for the summer.

Miss Irene Briggs was at Harrison
last Sunday.

Elmer Saunders and Alton Paine
were at Bethel, Tuesday.

Loss of Time when Sick

means loss of money, as well as physical suffering. Many forms of illness are avoidable by the use of a few common sense precautions.
Don't hurry your meals. Take time to chew your food properly;
mastication is the first and an important part of the digestive process. Don't eat when overworked; rest a few minutes. It will pay you. Don't borrow time for work when you should rest or sleep. Drink lots of water, and get your full share of exercise.
Don't allow your bowels to become constipated, but if this should happen, don't delay taking a dose of "L.F." Atwood's Medicine when you go to bed. It has been a safe, reliable remedy in hundreds of homes for more than sixty years. Large bottle 50 cents—one cent a dose. All druggists supply it.
